Legislation was recently adopted by the State of Alabama relative to revision of the Energy Code for new home construction.

The new energy code is expected to be of benefit to home buyers in the areas of indoor air quality and home value.

Our area is one of the few in the southeastern United States to have created a simplified pathway for state energy code compliance. The effort has been led by the Huntsville Madison County Builders Association and supported in an extraordinary way by the local inspection departments of Madison, Madison County, and Huntsville, along with Huntsville Utilities. This level of collaboration and participation by multiple municipalities and organizations is unparalleled in Alabama.

Huntsville, Madison, and Madison County are blessed with quality builders and leaders who are willing to come together to address complex issues such as state legislated energy code.
